Letter from the Wier

As I write, we are half way through Advent, the shops are already celebrating Christmas, I'm preparing for Easter services in 2024, compiling grants forms for projects later in the year, and hearing political pundits talk about economic forecasts for 2025! I feel like I'm getting lapped, so the temptation is to grab control by planning ahead, re-planning, then over-planning. It can become very destructive.

I know it makes sense to plan ahead because I'll be in trouble if I don't yet Jesus in Matthew 6:34 says, 'Do not worry about tomorrow', adding, 'Each day has enough trouble of its own'. There is much truth in both stances. How should we respond?

A former boss of mine had the catch-phrase, 'Failure to plan is planning to fail', which is true: reacting to circumstances is unlikely to result in wise choices, so its antidote is planning ahead. Jesus himself frequently planned ahead: think of his telling the disciples that he had planned everything for Palm Sunday (in Matthew 21) or for the Last Supper (in Mark 14, especially vv. 13–15).

But planning carefully is different from stressing and trying to second guess everything that could occur. We can put so much effort into planning for tomorrow that we forget to live today—that's what Jesus was warning against.

We need a happy medium between over-planning to the exclusion of living and reacting and risking mistakes. That midway point advises us to use our time wisely, so we can decide the amounts of time we will give to certain activities and causes. For example, we choose how much time we will set aside to study the scriptures or when to pray and for how long ... and will grow spiritually if we keep to them. We can also plan ahead how to respond if those prayer times are compromised.

Taken this way, the conscious decision to give time and attention to God is similar to a New Year's resolution for God. Like other New Year resolutions, it is less likely to lapse if we neither commit to something realistic nor commit without being precise.

Wishing you all a wonderful 2024 as we explore together our commitment to godliness:

PAUL

From the church and parish

We have now received competitive tenders for the roof over the church end of the Centre. The best quote is £233,000 which, with VAT, insulation, and architect fees means we must find £458,500. If needs be, we can replace the roof in two or even three phases.

The Diocese of Manchester has already committed to give us £15,000 toward this fee, and several other grant applications have been submitted.

The Bishop of Middleton, the Rt Revd Mark Davies, came to our Mission Community on Sunday 26 November for our first ever joint confirmation service. In all, he confirmed 19 candidates from 7 local churches. He also baptised 3 and received 1 adult member into the Church of England.

Contemplation is nothing else but a secret, peaceful, and loving infusion of God, which, if admitted, will set the soul on fire with the Spirit of love. John of the Cross

'Sometimes I forget to witness ... so now I'm covered!'

The idea of a covenant between a Christian and God appears frequently in the Bible. John Wesley, who founded the Methodist movement, wrote a 'Covenant Prayer' to be read aloud once a year at a special service. He held his first service on Monday 11 August 1755, at the French church at Spitalfields in London. It was attended by 1800 people.

Wesley attributed it to the English puritan Joseph Alleine (1634–1668), but he wrote it through the lens of his own churchmanship. We don't know the words of his original Covenant Prayer, but many think its words will have been similar to those Wesley published in his 1780 pamphlet Directions for Renewing our Covenant with God.

This idea of a covenant between a Christian and God was basic to John Wesley's understanding of Christian discipleship. He saw the relationship with God in covenant as being like a marriage between human beings (both as a community and as individuals) on the one side and God in Christ on the other (cf. Ephesians 5:21–33). Later versions incorporated words from the wedding service: Christ is 'my Head and Husband, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, for all times and conditions, to love, honour and obey thee before all others, and this to the death'.

Wesley recognised that people need to grow in their relationship with God. He emphasised repeatedly that God's grace and love both prompt us to seek Him and be transformed by Him, so we should pray to grow in holiness and love.

Over a number of years, Wesley gradually saw the need for some regular ceremony which would enable people to open themselves to God more fully. He looked for some means of helping them to hear God's offer and challenge ever more deeply and to allow God to prompt and enable them to respond.

Wesley's first service came from the Puritan tradition of pastoral and spiritual guidance. He therefore insisted that his own Covenant Service be located in a framework of pastoral care, preaching, and guidance.

That framework dealt with the corporate needs of a particular society of Christian disciples and, within that, with the needs of all the individuals within that group. It therefore linked personal devotion with corporate worship.

Although Wesley's early covenant services were not held at any particular time of year, in British Methodism the custom soon developed of holding Covenant Services near the beginning of the New Year.

I am no longer my own but yours. Put me to what you will, rank me with whom you will; put me to doing, put me to suffering; let me be employed for you, or laid aside for you, exalted for you, or brought low for you; let me be full. let me be empty, let me have all things, let me have nothing: I freely and wholeheartedly yield all things to your pleasure and disposal. And now, glorious and blessed God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, you are mine and I am yours. So be it. And the covenant now made on earth, let it be ratified in heaven. Amen.

We reiterate our own covenant with God during the first Sunday service of 2024.

The Covenant Service

The word 'mission' means an important assignment given to a person or group of people. The Lord Jesus gave a mission to his church, which he often expressed in terms of his idea of 'the Kingdom'. Helping to create this Kingdom lies at the centre of the template prayer he taught us when he told us to ask God, saying, 'You Kingdom come!'

The mission to create the Kingdom is a big subject, so the Church has helpfully issued a statement on mission, calling it the 'Marks of Mission'. It is based on Jesus' own mission and expresses the Anglican Communion's understanding and commitment to mission.

The Church has sub-divided the topic into five interconnected 'Marks' that each works toward the same goal. They are:

- 1. To proclaim the Good News of the Kingdom
- 2. To teach, baptise and nurture new believers
- 3. To respond to human need by loving service
- 4. To transform unjust structures of society, to challenge violence of every kind and pursue peace, and to reconciliation
- 5. To strive to safeguard the integrity of creation, and sustain and renew the life of the earth.

The marks of mission

Goliath's replacement was even less effective (with apologies to 1 Samuel 17)

The first Mark of Mission, which concerns evangelism and summarises the central idea of what mission is about, should be the key statement about everything we do in mission. It seeks to bring ever more people into a relationship with God. To that end, we are to 'proclaim'.

The concept of proclaiming the Good News of the Kingdom is very simple. We tell people about God using whichever methods come to hand. The word 'Gospel' means 'Good News', so proclaiming wrath or unpleasant ideas about God is not sharing the Good News. Rather, we should concentrate on God's goodness and His unconditional love.

In fact, the word 'proclaim' has a wide range of meanings. At one extreme, it means to 'preach' and teach', sharing the message verbally and in print. But we can also reason and explain, use metaphors and parables, by means of pre-prepared texts or off-the-cuff discussions. All are valid.

It's important that we teach by example, so telling people will see us before they hear what we say. Preaching about God's love requires that we aim to be loving. In the same way, proclaiming a message that differs from our own behaviour can imply we are being hypocritical.

There is one further reason why we should proclaim the Gospel. As any teacher will explain, the best way to understand an idea or subject is to teach it. By proclaiming the Good News, we will better understand the ideas, and therefore find it easier to follow for ourselves.

The first mark of mission

Preach the Gospel at all times.

Only use words if necessary.

Usually attributed to Francis of Assisi

This is a season of weeping and mourning, but it is not void of hope. Our tears are the bridge between brutality and humanity.

Our tears are the salty gates for seeing a different reality.

Our tears are facing soulless nations and a parched mentality.

Our tears are the dam preventing rivers of animosity.

For the sake of the mourning men, cry with us to reflect your amity.

For the sake of the poor children, cry with us demanding sanity.

For the sake of lamenting mothers, refuse violence and stupidity.

Love your enemies and cry with them is the advice of divinity.

Blessing those who curse is the path to genuine spirituality.

Pouring tears of mercy and compassion is true piety.

Pray with tears, for the sake of spreading equity.

Followers of Jesus: crying is now our responsibility.

But don't cry for your friends only, cry also for your enemy.

Prayer for peace

I made a covenant with my hands not to be reaching for love and praise which once were all my light. These are for Christ by the most utter right.

I made a covenant with my tongue not to be speaking of aught that draws me from the Word apart, much less to interpret Him in my heart.

I made a covenant with my eyes not to be watching to see what beauty might come down to me. Christ is my beauty; Him alone I see.

I made a covenant with my heart never and nowhere to be admitting any lover but Him. I take for witnesses the Seraphim.

This is the document I have been writing in painful letters for these many years with shame and failure and a yield of tears.

I made two copies for my own protection: one to be carried, ready to unroll, one to post up on gates outside my soul.

John was born Juan de Yepes y Álvarez in Castile, Spain. His family were Jewish converts to Catholicism, and were therefore considered 'tainted'. His father, Gonzalo, was an accountant to richer relatives who were silk merchants but, in 1529 he married John's mother Catalina, who was an orphan from a lower class; his family rejected him, forcing him to work with his wife as a weaver. John's father died in 1545 while John was still only around three years old. Thereafter, the family were so poor that, two years after John's birth, his older brother Luis died of starvation, probably as a result of the poverty to which the family had been reduced. John himself was tiny—almost a dwarf

The family moved to Medina where John was enrolled in a school for paupers and received a basic education, food, clothing, and lodging. He later worked at a hospital while studying at a Jesuit school from 1559 to 1563. He entered the Carmelite Order in 1563 taking the name 'John of St Matthias'.

John made his first vows in 1564 and travelled to Salamanca University to study theology and philosophy where he excelled in everything.

John was ordained a priest in 1567 and moved back to Medina where, by chance, he met the influential and charismatic Carmelite nun Teresa of Ávila, who was staving there to found the second of her new convents. In context, she wanted to restore the purity of the ancient Carmelite Order by reverting to the observance of its 'Primitive Rule' of 1209, which had been relaxed by Pope Eugene IV in 1432. Teresa wanted something much stricter with lengthy periods of fasting; long periods of silence; simpler habits of coarser cloth; and an injunction against wearing covered shoes. That particular observance distinguished the 'discalced' (so 'barefoot') followers of Teresa from traditional Carmelites.

John soon became her disciple and, in 1568, helped form the first monastery for Carmelite men to follow Teresa's principles. They were given a derelict house that had been donated to Teresa. There, he established the monastery on 28 November 1568 and changed his monastic name to 'John of the Cross'.

The new order grew fast. During the years 1575–77, the reforms under Teresa and John caused tensions between the new and old Carmelite wings of the order and, on 2 December 1577, John was kidnapped by a group of Carmelites opposed to the reforms, who jailed him. The regime was brutal and included public lashings and severe isolation in a tiny stifling cell measuring barely 10 by 6 feet. He had to stand on a bench to read his prayer book by a tiny overhead light.

During this imprisonment he composed much of his most famous poem,

The Spiritual Canticle, as well as several shorter poems. The paper on which he wrote was smuggled to him by the friar who guarded his cell. He managed to escape eight months later, on 15 August 1578, through a small window in a room adjoining his cell.

John was nursed back to health by Teresa's nuns in Toledo, but swiftly returned to the controversial reforms. In 1580, the Pope recognised the reform, so John's life became much safer. Thereafter, John travelled widely and accepted a wide array of posts in the new Carmelite Order. In 1591, he went to an isolated monastery in Andalusia where he fell ill, and died in agony on 14 December 1591. He was 49 years of age.

Today, John of the Cross is considered one of the foremost poets in the Spanish language. Two of his works, the Spiritual Canticle and the Dark Night of the Soul, are widely considered masterpieces of Spanish poetry, and his theological works often consist of commentaries on these poems. For example, the Dark Night of the Soul narrates the journey of a soul from its bodily home to union with God and the experiences required to attain spiritual maturity and union with God. This union is achieved through learning to love. His later book the Ascent of Mount Carmel is a systematic study of how a soul ascends when seeking a loving union with God, and his book the Living Flame of Love describes a greater intimacy with God as the soul responds to God's love. His books and poems, together with his Sayings of Light and Love, are probably the most important spiritual works in Spanish, and have influenced more later writers more than any other mystical author.

Eternal Father. who at the baptism of Jesus revealed him to be your Son, anointing him with the Holy Spirit: grant to us, who are born again by water and the Spirit, that we may be faithful to our calling as your adopted children; through Jesus Christ your Son our Lord, who is alive and reigns with you, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, now and for ever.

Amen

Love's hidden thread has drawn us to the font, A wide womb floating on the breath of God, Feathered with seraph wings, lit with the swift Lightening of praise, with thunder over-spread,

And under-girded with an unheard song, Calling through water, fire, darkness, pain, Calling us to the life for which we long, Yearning to bring us to our birth again.

Again the breath of God is on the waters In whose reflecting face our candles shine, Again he draws from death the sons and daughters For whom he bid the elements combine.

As living stones around a font today, Rejoice with those who roll the stone away.

Jesus Christ

'Christ' is a title or description. It is not surname like 'Smith' or 'Jones'. In fact, if Jesus had a surname, it would have been 'bar-Joseph' which means 'Son of Joseph'.

The Bible always insists that Jesus was God:

- Titus 3:6 talks of 'our great God and saviour Jesus Christ'.
- John 1:1 says, 'The Word was with God and the Word was God.' In this context, it is clear that 'The Word' means Jesus.

Anointing

Anointing was a Jewish way of preparing a person for a special task or duty. All candidates for baptism and confirmation are anointed.

Many people in the Bible were anointed.

For example, David was anointed with olive oil to indicate that he would be Israel's next king (1 Samuel 16:13).

Why Jesus 'Christ'?

'Christ' is a Greek word that translates the Hebrew word 'Messiah'.

Both words mean 'Anointed'

Jesus was anointed by the Holy Spirit when he was baptised. At the same time, he saw the Holy Spirit coming down from Heaven in the form of a dove.

The Church remembers the baptism of Christ on Sunday 7 January Didyou know?

Jesus said, 'Where two or three gather together in my name, there am I with them' Matthew 18:20.

Of the early precursors to our current idea of a church and its congregation, perhaps the most important influence was the Synagogue. For a meeting in a Jewish synagogue to be legal, the minimum attendance was twelve men. It was quite common for a Synagogue meeting to be cancelled because too few men were present (even if women could have supplemented their numbers).

The Jewish people at this time considered the number ten to be sacred, for example because there were ten commandments.

Almost certainly, those rules concerning the synagogue derived from events in the Temple. Many of the more important Temple celebrations, such as the blessing the bread of the presence, were only considered valid if the Spirit of God had descended to join those present ... and the necessary criterion was for twelve elders to gather as a kind of 'sacred quorum'. In a similar way, one of the most important religious congregations that occurred in a synagogue involved reading aloud the Law and interpreting it; and again, twelve elders needed to be attendance. Some scholars think that Jesus chose twelve disciples in order to satisfy these ancient traditions.

Jesus was the Messiah (or, in Greek, 'Christ') because he was anointed with the Spirit of God. The Spirit was with him because of that anointing, so he was able to interpret scripture (think of the New Commandment in John 13:30); and, similarly, when Jesus established a new form of community—an assembly of people who congregated 'in his name'—it was natural that he also re-interpreted the relevant traditions.

When Jesus said that only two or three of his disciples needed to convene in order for him to be present, he was saying that his disciples were also filled with the Spirit. That's why we can bless bread at the Eucharist even if the number gathering is small.

A prayer for an unknown future

My Lord God:

I have no idea where I am going.

I do not see the road ahead of me.

Nor do I really know myself, and the fact that I think that I am following your will does not mean that I am actually doing so.

But I believe that the desire to please you does in fact please you.

And I hope that I have that desire in all that I am doing.

I hope that I will never do anything apart from that desire.

And I know that if I do this you will lead me

by the right road

though I may know nothing about it.

Therefore will I trust in you always though I may seem to be lost and in the shadow of death.

I will not fear, for you are ever with me, and you will never leave me to face my perils alone.

Amen.
